For lawyer review — every finding is pinned to a document, a location and a verbatim quote.

What this report is — and is not

This report is an organisation of the documents you supplied, prepared by software for a licensed legal professional. It is not legal advice, and no attorney–client relationship exists between you and BizLegal AI.

It states no law, computes no deadlines, cites no authorities and expresses no view on the merits. Whether any finding matters, and what to do about it, is your professional judgement.

Findings are produced by an AI model and then checked by software only for whether the quoted words appear in the source. A finding marked "source-pinned" means the quote was found; it does not mean the statement is true, complete or legally significant. Items marked "unverified" failed that check and are listed only so you can look.

Documents were processed by Anthropic (model provider) and stored privately by BizLegal AI; they are not used to train any model. Delete on request.

Summary

This audit examined 10 documents containing 115 source-pinned facts across 24 events in Harlow v. Brightline Builders LLC. The engine identified 7 high-severity contradictions involving 41 fact pairs, concentrated in six core issues (I1–I6). Seven evidentiary gaps were flagged where allegations lack corroboration or are opposed without documentary support.

What stands out

- I1: Complaint states Harlow first discovered the leak in March 2025, but WhatsApp messages show he reported a ceiling leak to Marcus Reed on 13 November 2024.
- I2: The Renovation Agreement specifies a $48,000 deposit, the bank confirmation shows $48,000 paid, but the Answer states Harlow paid $40,000 on 14 February 2024.
- I3: Brightline's letter acknowledges receipt of Harlow's email of 20 March 2025, yet the Answer asserts it received no written notice of defect until served with the lawsuit.
- I4: Harlow's affidavit states he never discussed any roof problem with Reed before March 2025, contradicted by WhatsApp messages in which he reports the leak to Reed in November 2024.
- I5: The Answer alleges solar panels were installed on the rear roof in October 2024 causing water ingress, but WhatsApp messages record Harlow stating the panels are on the front roof and the leak is at the back.
- G (A2, A5, A6, A11, A12, A15): Seven allegations are either opposed without supporting documents or rest solely on a party's own pleading, including the deposit amount, discovery date, November 2024 leak report, building permits, and prior discussions of the roof problem.

What the engine could not read or verify

- Three adjudication batches failed schema validation during contradiction analysis (batches 3, 9, 10); findings may undercount contradictions in those segments.
- No independent expert report on the $35,000 remedial cost estimate (A10) was supplied for verification.
- The certificate of completion referenced in the Answer and Brightline's letter was not provided; the engine could not verify its existence, date, or content.
- No building permit documents were supplied; the engine could not verify whether permits were obtained or required (A11, A12).
- The formal notice of defects document and the email of 20 March 2025 acknowledged in Brightline's letter appear to be distinct documents; only the former was available for review.

"the ceiling in the back bedroom is leaking again after last night's rain"

The ceiling in the back bedroom leaked after rain on the night of 2024-11-13.

Why they conflict: The Complaint asserts first discovery occurred in March 2025. The WhatsApp message from November 2024 shows Harlow knew of and reported the ceiling leak months earlier. These dates are incompatible.

"Plaintiff paid Defendant $40,000 on or about 14 February 2024"

Daniel Harlow paid Brightline Builders LLC $40,000 on or about 14 February 2024.

Why they conflict: The contract required a 50% deposit of $48,000. Brightline's own Answer admits that Harlow paid only $40,000 on or about 14 February 2024. These are incompatible amounts for the same deposit payment; $40,000 is $8,000 short of the contractually required $48,000.

"Defendant received no written notice of any alleged defect until it was served with this lawsuit."

Brightline Builders LLC asserts that it received no written notice of any alleged defect until it was served with this lawsuit.

Why they conflict: Brightline's letter dated 2 April 2025 explicitly acknowledges receipt of Harlow's email of 20 March 2025. However, Brightline's Answer pleading asserts it received no written notice of any alleged defect until served with the lawsuit. These statements about receipt of written notice are directly incompatible.

Brightline Builders LLC asserts that any water ingress is the result of solar panels installed on the rear roof by a third party engaged by Daniel Harlow in October 2024, after Brightline Builders LLC had left the site.

Source B: 04-whatsapp-harlow-reed.txt · msg 9 · 2025-01-10 · source-pinned

"The solar panels are on the front roof, the leak is at the back"

Daniel Harlow stated that the solar panels are on the front roof and the leak is at the back.

Why they conflict: Brightline's pleading states solar panels were installed on the rear roof. Harlow's contemporaneous message states the solar panels are on the front roof and the leak is at the back. These are incompatible locations for the same solar panel installation.

"the ceiling in the back bedroom is leaking again after last night's rain. There is a wet patch the size of a dinner plate"

Daniel Harlow reported to Marcus Reed that the ceiling in the back bedroom is leaking again after last night's rain, with a wet patch the size of a dinner plate.

Why they conflict: Brightline's letter states they first learned of the alleged roof defect from Harlow's letter of 20 March 2025. However, WhatsApp messages show Harlow reported to Marcus Reed (Brightline's managing member) on 14 November 2024 that the ceiling was leaking again with a wet patch. This earlier communication contradicts the claim that they first learned of it in March 2025.

How these findings were produced

Each document was split into anchored segments (pages, paragraphs or messages). An AI model extracted facts, each with a verbatim quote and the segment it came from.

Software then checked every quote against the source text: exact match -> "source-pinned"; near match ($\geq 85\%$ character-bigram similarity) -> "pinned (near match)"; scanned pages have no text layer, so their quotes are checked only against the model's own transcription -> "from scanned pages"; anything else -> "unverified" and excluded from every count, timeline, contradiction and matrix entry.

Contradiction candidates are pairs of pinned facts from different documents that share a person or entity and a topic; the model judged each candidate; severity is a fixed rule (sworn vs contemporaneous document, statements by a party, timing gap, amount mismatch, confidence).

Allegations come from pleadings and sworn statements; other documents are classified as supporting or opposing; an allegation with no independent support is a gap. Absent document categories are drawn from a fixed list and are not advice.
